

Launch of the UHC2030 statement

on sustainability and transition from external funding

UHC2030 is the global movement to strengthen health systems for universal health coverage.

UHC2030 has developed a set of common principles to guide the actions of national governments, development agencies, private sector, civil society groups and other health actors, in response to transition from external funding. The principles aim to provide the basis for advocacy and political influencing and help inform transition related coordination in countries and globally.

Health system strengthening is at the core of the response to transition if progress towards UHC is to be sustained. Transition provides the opportunity to examine how governance financing and service delivery are configured to ensure the sustainability of effective coverage of priority interventions and services towards UHC.

Wednesday
10th October
7.30–8.30am
ACC Room 4B

We present the statement of principles developed by the sustainability and transition working group of the UHC 2030 partnership. Discussants drawn from government, development partners and civil society will reflect on the implications of the statement for their own programming and practice.

Come and follow the debate on what changes are needed to operationalize the UHC2030 statement on sustainability and transition from external funding.
